Application of Legal Provisions, Guidelines and Protocols in Managing Safety and Health

We are in unprecedented times. The Covid-19 outbreak has not just changed how we work but increased the safety and health risks at the workplace. Mr. Stephen Obiro, Head of Advocacy, Communication and Partnership while opening the forum on behalf of the Executive Director noted that Covid-19 has a relationship with the workplace and the measures enterprises institute at the workplace determine the levels of risk of exposure.

The sessions were presented by a team of experts from the Federation’s Legal and Industrial Relations department including Mr. Moses Ombokh and Mr. George Masese. From the interactive sessions, most questions centered on understanding the perspective of Covid-19 as an Occupational disease and what the implications are on employers.

This masterclass attracted 150 participants with the aim to build the capacity of employers on OSH in the wake of Covid-19 thereby minimizing their exposure.
